

Hi Team,

My name is Brandon, and although I understand this is not the most orthodox method to apply, I wanted to share my experience and skillset with you because I believe I'd be a great fit for your team, specifically as a junior web developer. I am a fourth-year computer science student at UC Santa Cruz, who lives in Livermore, CA. I have a solid academic and professional background in web development due to my two experiences building pages for different companies, UCSC Admissions and AZDEQ which required me to have extensive knowledge in topics such as content migration, D7 to D10 updating, and creating a headless web app using Next.JS and WordPress.

This strong foundation, combined with my professional experience, makes me a well-rounded candidate for a Junior Web Developer position.

I am confident that my skills in front-end technologies, database management, and project coordination will make a positive impact on your team. I am eager to contribute to your success and am enthusiastic about the opportunity to grow and learn in this role. Feel free to view my resume on my web page as well listed at the bottom of this message.

Best,

Brandon Corona-Bhardwaj
